BASED ON STEHLIN CASE

MADISON-AVENUE PEOPLE SUE SALOON KEEPER FOR DAMAGES.

Their Property, Which Adjoins the Damaged-Receiver for Loan Association Asked For.

Ritter & Baker yesterday filed two damage suits in the Superior Court which are based upon the decision in the famous Stehlin saloon case, in which the Supreme Court laid down the rule that there is no inherent right vested in any person to maintain a saloon and that no one has a right to keep and operate a saloon to the detriment of adjoining or near-by property owners. Elizabeth Stieb and Theressa Wilhelm own residences at 629 and 625 Madison avenue. Between these two residences is a saloon owned by Horace Henn, the property being owned by Frances Henn.

The two complaints are practically alike. Horace and Frances Henn being defendants in both cases, and $1,500 damages being demanded in each case. SHE DESTROYED THE LEASE. Keystone Company Wants Her to Execute a New One.

The Keystone Oil and Gas Company yesterday filed a peculiar suit in the Circuit Court. It is claimed that on March 28, 1896, the defendant, Isaac Bomgarden, executed a lease to certain land near Broad Ripple to Alexander McKnight, which lease was later assigned to the plaintiff. The lease gave the plaintiff the oil, gas and minrights on the land for six months, or as much longer as oil or gas should be found in paying quantities. Yesterday Bomgarden and his wife called at the office of the Keystone Oil and Gas Company and asked to see the lease, saying that his wife wanted to read it. As soon as she obtained possession of it she destroyed it. The plaintiff asks that the defendant be required to execute a new lease.

CHAMPIONS, 14; COLUMBUS, 10. It Was a "See-Saw" Game Decided in the Tenth.

That was a queer game yesterday. The champions had it well in hand until the eighth and the margin, though very small, appeared sufficient as Phillips was pitching good ball and the fielding was sharp and clean. In the eighth Shannon made an awful mess of it and the game seemed lost, utterly so. But "Bumpus" Jones, who was pitching for Columbus, had another attack of wildness, and that, with a couple of yesterday paid into the county clerk's office | long hits enabled Indianapolis to tie the score. The rest was easy, the funny part of it all being Cantillon's attempt to play for darkness that was about an hour and a half away. He allowed Watkins's men to roll up five runs, three of which they would have scored anyway. Then they went out in order without attempting to add more runs. By that time, too, Cantillon had concluded it was futile to continue Peter Stuck yesterday sued the Pennsyl- his tactics so when the Indianapolis bat ters offered easy chances they were ac-

> The fielding features of the game were catches by Hogan and Stewart, the former a short fly from Genins's bat in the first inning, and the latter's one-hand "circus" catch of a liner fly which McCormack hit between first and second in the second inning and which Stewart took on the jump. Motz had a couple of good line catches and the outfield work was fine with the single exception of Hogan's muff in the eighth, which was probably due to a hard run. Phillips was effective pretty much all through the game. Jones kept the hits well scattered up to the ninth, but he failed to separate his bases on balls. The bunching of these gifts had much to do with the loss of the game by Columbus. Indianapolis took a good comfortable lead in the second inning when, with one out, Motz hit to center and went on to second, when Genins fumbled the ball. Shiebeck flew to Campbell and then Jones developed an exceedingly wild streak, sending three men to base in succession and forcing in a run. Singles by Hogriever and Wood drove in three more and then Stewart New out Genins. This lead did not look so healthy after Columbus had finished its half. Cantillon opened with a base on balls and Parrott hit to right for two bases. Motz caught Campbell's liner but in attempting to double Parrott at second, threw badly and Cantilion scored. Mc-Carthy picked up the ball and threw it to Sheibeck who let it get by him and Parrott scored. McCormick's liner was captured by Stewart just as it was sailing in apparent safety over his head, and Jones was retired from Stewart to Motz. The visitors kept on scoring in the third when singles by Butler, Wilson and Sharp, together with a wild pitch, a passed ball and a long fly enabled them to tie the score. Sharp was caught at the plate on Cantillon's grounder to pitcher and Parrott flew to Hogriever. Indianapolis had a shade the best of it again in the sixth when, with one out, Shan> non hit to center for a base. Hogan fouled out to catcher. A wild pitch let Shannon reach third and he scored on Phillips's single to left. Hogriever flew to Sharp. There was a howl of dismay when Shannon picked up Wilson's grounder in the eighth and slammed it over Motz's head into the bleachers. Wilson reached third on the error. Sharp was out from short to first, and, with the infield playing close up to catch Wilson, Shannon let an easy one from Genins's bat roll serenely into left field. Cantillon and Parrett followed with singles: Hogan dropped Campbell's short fly after a hard run and McCormick hit safe to center. The result of all this bad work was five runs and a most discouraging outlook. Jones went out from Shiebeck to Motz and the latter threw across and caught McCormick, who tried to make third on

> Then the champions started in on the apparently hopeless task of catching up phillips flew to Genins, but Hogriever and Wood got bases on balls, McCarthy hit to left for two bases and Stewart got scratch triple in the same direction, which was tied. The next two men were quickly case of one, two, three. Shannon owed his club a few runs, and appeared thoroughly aware of the fact. He started the tenth with a nice double to left. Hogan tried to sacrifice and succeeded in reaching first on Campbell's muff of Jones's throw, which was a little low, owing to a hard chase after the bunt. Phillips drove a ball to right for what would have been a threebagger, but which Cantillon trotted after so slowly as to stretch into a home run. The dilatory tactics referred to in the beginning of this account then began, and Hogriever and Wood were allowed to make the circuit on their hits. Umpire McDonaid told the Columbus men that he intended to make them play the game out, so there was no further attempt at delay. The next three batamen allowed themselves to be put out on easy hits. With one out in the last half Columbus filled the bases on three singles, the last one, that of Parrot, being a scratch which bounded badly to Phillips. Campbell's fly to Hogan scored Genins, but McGreevy, who had batted for Cantillon, was caught stealing third, and the game ended. Twelve hundred people witnessed it, and made considerable noise in the ninth and tenth innings. Score: A.B R. H. O. A. E.

The best hope the doctor could hold out to me was that I might be able to get around again and attend to my household longer. But instead of getting better I grew steadily worse. One day I happened to read in the paper about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and decided to give them a trial. Immediately after taking them and before I had used half a box I saw a marked change for the better in my condition. All this time, however, I was confined to my bed. I continued taking the medicine until I had used four boxes, and by that time I was able to be about and around trouble for many years. She had been doctored | again.
